

for the proposition that even under Rule 26(a), a party still needs to establish a good faith basis for seeking personal contact information about other parties or witnesses.” The defendants ask that the Court reconsider and “revise its prior Order to eliminate any obligation on the part of defendants to provide personal contact information for the witnesses at issue.” The plaintiff opposes the motion.

Legal Standard

Local Civil Rule 6.3 of this court provides for a motion for reconsideration or reargument, requiring the movant to set forth, in a memorandum of law, “concisely the matters or controlling decisions which counsel believes the Court has overlooked.” Local Civil Rule 6.3.

The standard for granting such a motion is strict, and reconsideration will generally be denied unless the moving party can point to controlling decisions or data that the court overlooked— matters, in other words, that might reasonably be expected to alter the conclusion reached by the court.

Shrader v. CSX Transp. Inc., 70 F.3d 255, 257 (2d Cir. 1995). Thus, a motion to reconsider should not be granted where the moving party is solely attempting to relitigate an issue that has already been decided. Id. “To be entitled to [reconsideration] under Local [Civil] Rule [6.3, the movant] must demonstrate that the court overlooked controlling decisions or factual matters that were put before the court on the underlying motion.” Ashley Meadows Farm, Inc. v. Am. Horse Shows Ass’n, Inc., 624 F. Supp. 856, 857 (S.D.N.Y. 1985).

Application of Legal Standard

The defendants have failed to identify any controlling factual or legal matter that was brought to the Court’s attention on the underlying motion that the Court overlooked. In his opposition to the plaintiff’s motion to compel, the defendants’ counsel stated, with respect to the allegation that the defendants failed to comply with Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a), that “[g]iven plaintiff’s continued improper behavior, I have no intention of providing him with contact information for any of defendants' witnesses, each of whom can be produced, if necessary, through my office." The defendants' counsel did not provide any additional basis or reason for opposing this branch of the plaintiff's motion to compel, and the Court did not fail to overlook the defendants' assertion in reaching its conclusion. To the extent that the defendants purport to make a new argument or seek new relief, their application is not properly brought as a motion for reconsideration.

The defendants do not contend explicitly that the Court overlooked any controlling decisions put before it in their opposition to the plaintiff's motion to compel.² However, they contend that "there is case law" that supports their position, namely, Caraveo v. Nielsen Media Research, Inc., et al., No. 01 Civ. 9609, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7126 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 24, 2003). However, Caraveo concerns, primarily, a request by the plaintiff for contact information of individuals who are not parties to the lawsuit, a request which the Court determined was an improper use of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a), and therefore is not applicable here. Moreover, even if the case were applicable, it could not serve as a basis for granting the defendants' motion for reconsideration because it is not a controlling decision.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, the defendants' motion for reconsideration of the Court's ²Such an assertion would be without basis, in any case. As the Court noted in its September 9, 2014 Memorandum and Order, "the defendants have cited no authority in support of their proposition that they are not required to comply with Rule 26(a) by providing the contact information mandated by that rule for the individuals in question."

September 9, 2014 Memorandum and Order, Docket Entry No. 172, is denied.
